CLARIFICATIONS, QUESTIONS FROM POTENTIAL SUBMITTERS AND ANSWERS

Questions and Responses:

Q1. We understand that the contractor is required to provide the QC material testing as part of their work, but QA is typically either handled by the municipality or the engineer. For this project, will the engineer be responsible for providing QA testing?

A1. The selected construction engineer would not be responsible for providing in-house QA testing. The selected construction engineer would be tasked with ensuring the contractors complete the QC testing.

Q2. Can the proposed team have different multipliers?

A2. Yes – more than one multiplier is allowed.

Q3. Please advise what template/type of report is required for the DBE subcontractors and if this is required with our RFQ response, per the following: If DBE subcontractors will be utilized for the project, a completed and signed report is needed from each DBE subcontractor.

A3. A DBE report is not required at time of RFQ submittal. A report can be included at time of RFQ submittal if the consultant would like to include a report. Including proof of advertisement for DBE/MBE participation would be preferred. As this DBE/MBE requirement is an IEPA SRF requirement, we would refer you to clarify this with IEPA SRF. As reference, see the DBE forms used for contractor bids in the "St. Pat's Phase 1A Water Main Improvements" found on the City's website, and linked at www.joliet.gov/home/showpublisheddocument/31391/638041997683270000. The specific reference forms are forms: 00 74 23.01 DBE FORM #1 (CONTRACTOR CERTIFICATION); 00 74 23.02 DBE FORM #3 (SUBCONTRACTOR UTILIZATION); 00 74 23.03 DBE FORM #4 (BIDDER'S LIST).
